HANBRIDGE IS EASY WINNER

MADMAN RUNS UNPLACED IN RACE IN WHICH HOLLE SPRINTER IS VICTOR.

H. G. Bedwell's Lochiel Scores in Race Designed as Preliminary to the Cincinnati Trophy, but Results Are Not Conclusive.

Cincinnati, O., June 28.—Today's fourth race at Latona, serving as a preliminary for the rich Cincinnati Trophy, to be decided next Saturday, brought together the best juveniles in this section, with the exception of Governor Gray. His owner had carded him, but the stiff going, it was thought, would militate against him and he was withdrawn. His absence was disappointing, but the race still held a lot of interest and speculation was of large volume on the various starters. In the running H. G. Bedwell's Lochiel proved much the best and won with consummate ease from Alice A. Dale and Golden Egg. The latter, considered to be the best filly in these parts, had no mishaps, was away forwardly and was in front until she was passed on the stretch turn with a rush by Lochiel and later by Alice A. Dale. McIvor, the winner of the Harold Stakes, of which much was expected, began slowly and trailed his field distantly, as though disliking the going. Lochiel is not among those nominated for the Trophy and the running of the others did not give much of a line on the probable outcome of next Saturday's event.

In the handicap at three-quarters Hanbridge showed an improved performance, mostly due to the better handling than in his former effort when beaten by Righteasy and Emperor William. Herbert restrained him in the early stages and he came away in the stretch to win from Merriek and Emperor William. The disappointment of the race was Madman. In striking contrast to his brilliant showing in the Brewers' Exchange Handicap last Saturday, he was a distant trailer today and finished far in the rear.

The closing dash resulted in the closest finish of the afternoon, Shapdale winning from Plantland with Sticker in third place, necks separating the trio. Plantland was best, but Troxler gave him a poor ride. After the finish Troxler was sharply criticised by Judge Price and was informed that another ride of the same sort would mean his suspension. Troxler in explanation said that the riders on Sticker and Shapdale were herding him during the first three-quarters.

Mona Lisa, in the opener, spreadeagled thirteen other maiden fillies and won in a canter. Griffling, making his first start here, beat a poor lot in the second and Dictian had no difficulty in landing the purse in the third race as his rider pleased.

F. J. Pons returned today from Jacksonville, Fla., and expressed a belief that none of the other cases pending against bookmakers that operated at Moncreiff Park last winter would ever go to trial, because of the favorable verdict handed down last Saturday.

Jockey W. Knapp received a letter today from August Belmont, chairman of the Jockey Club, to the effect that he had a cable from a wealthy turf patron in Germany who is seeking the services of an American jockey. Mr. Belmont in his letter stated that he would recommend Knapp for the position if he cared to accept. Knapp sent back word that he was eager to attach himself to a foreign stable and would go abroad if the terms were suitable.

H. G. Bedwell will ship his entire string of racers to New York on Sunday next and engage in the meeting which opens at Empire City July 5.

Jockey Austin sustained a shaking up by a fall when Tony W. stumbled. Charles Walters, a well-known bookmaker, arrived from Canada today and was busy at the auction pool stand during the afternoon buying fields against the favorites.

Secretary Bidwell of the Kentucky State Racing Commission has among today's visitors, J. O. Keene added Miami to the horses he shipped to Fort Erie this morning. He is confident that Booda Booda will win the Canadian Derby on the opening day.

G. W. King-Dodds arrived today from Hamilton and is trying to purchase several likely racers to take back to Canada.

Fotsch, which started in the third race, broke down during the running.

J. R. Wainwright's string will be shipped to Fort Erie next Thursday.

CONDENSED HISTORY OF THE LONG ISLAND HANDICAP

Compared with the Suburban and a number of the other fixed events of the Coney Island Jockey Club's annual program, the Long Island Handicap is of recent establishment, having first been run in 1894, when that little bulldog of a race horse, Sir Walter, triumphed over Roche, Don Alonzo and other good ones. It is worth noting that the same Sir Walter was not far from winning it twice afterwards, running second in 1895 and 1897. It is an event in which western-owned horses have been moderately successful, Bangle, Proper, Dishabile and Cottontown winning it for men hailing from the west. Such other high-class handicap horses as Ramapo, Clifford, Ogden, Gold Heels, Herbert, Major Daingerfield and Fashion Plate are in the list of Long Island winners and the record of the race is:

COMMENT ON NEW YORK SITUATION.

"Reading carefully the bill just signed by Governor Hughes prohibiting the 'making of book, with or without writing,' you will find nothing that prevents individual betting, said a lawyer familiar with racing circles recently. 'The term 'making book' is out of date and does not cover the present form of speculation on the race courses. It is a fact that few of the legislators and reformers know the exact meaning of the terms 'bookmaking' and 'pool-selling,' which were used prior to the enactment of the Percy Gray measure. 'Bookmaking' is the opinion of eminent legal authorities in this state is a combination of things. To convict a person of 'bookmaking' it must be shown that he quotes odds, accepts cash bets, records the conditions of these wagers and gives to the bettors tickets by which winning bets can be collected. By doing all of these things in connection with a single transaction a man violates the law against 'bookmaking' as defined by the highest courts.

"Last November the Court of Appeals decided that oral betting at stated odds without a written or printed memorandum was not 'bookmaking' as prohibited by the constitution of the state and the penal code. That is the form of betting that prevails on the tracks today, and it cannot be called 'bookmaking.' In view of these facts one naturally asks the meaning of the term 'makes book without writing.' How can such a thing be done? Is a man a 'bookmaker' who bets 2 to 1 with a friend or several friends that a certain horse will not win in a certain race? Where is the evidence? I think you'll find that persons apprehended under the new law cannot be convicted without written records of transactions as evidence.

"Even the making of such a bet cannot be established unless there is proof that money was posted by both parties to it and that the whole amount was paid to one or the other after the race. In the opinion of eminent lawyers with whom I have talked it is going to be extremely difficult to secure conclusive evidence and to enforce this law, which has been termed ambiguous by the racing interests. If it is not a crime to make a bet, and there is no law on the statute books that prevents betting, how can a man who makes a wager at stated odds without the passing of cash beforehand or a written record of the transaction be convicted of a misdemeanor?

"It is my contention that when the giving of a ticket to a bettor in return for a cash wager was eliminated by law 'bookmaking' was wiped out. So was 'pool-selling.' From a strictly legal point of view there is no such thing as a 'poolroom'; the term is applied to places outside of race tracks, where bets are made. 'Betting room' is the name for such a place. As the matter stands now, conditions have not been changed by legislation except to make the law more ambiguous relating to 'bookmaking.' If a test case is brought after September 1 I feel sure that the courts will decide that a person who makes a bet at odds with a friend is not a 'bookmaker' unless he uses paraphernalia in the shape of sheets, tickets and a slate by which he can display odds to solicit business from all comers. If this anti-race track bill had been properly drawn by the advice of practical bettors more effective results would have been obtained. As it is the term 'bookmaking, with or without writing,' is meaningless, and I think it will be so demonstrated in time. The point not to be overlooked at any time is that it is not against the law to make a bet. On that alone depends the future of racing in the State of New York, and as soon as the courts have passed upon the matter the atmosphere will clear."

Regarding the probability of conducting race meetings after September 1, it may be said that the Jockey Club will leave the matter entirely to the judgment of counsel. There is no law against racing and it is just possible that some of the tracks will try to run with all forms of betting prohibited for the time being. It is a sure thing that the new laws will be carried to the courts, however, whether the tracks open or not after the above date.—New York Sun.

IMPOSING MONETARY RETURNS AT ASCOT.

In daily distribution of money to winning horses the meeting at Ascot, England, stands alone. No other meeting in the world approaches it in that respect. The reason for this is that every race run at Ascot is a stake race. None is of surpassing value, but all are well worth winning. At the recent Ascot meeting of four days, which ended Friday, June 17, the most valuable race was the Ascot Gold Cup, which netted Bayardo $18,500. The least valuable was the All-Aged Stakes, of $2,050, which fell to Mr. Whitney's New Castle. The table below gives the name of each race run at the meeting, winners, owners of the winning horses and values. On the financial side it is a remarkable exhibit and one fully justifying the appellation "Royal Ascot."

W. K. VANDERBILT'S RIPOLIN WINNER.

Paris, France, June 28.—W. K. Vanderbilt's Ripolin was the winner today of the Prix D'Aigre-mont, a selling race of $600, distance one mile and four and one-half furlongs, at Maisons-Laffitte. In the Prix D'Essai des Pouliches, for two-year-old fillies, of $1,000, distance half a mile, Frank J. Gould's Jarretier finished third.

GREEN B. MORRIS VICTIM OF ACCIDENT.

Salt Lake City, Utah, June 28.—The veteran turfman, Green B. Morris, who is racing a modest string of horses here, was badly injured in a runaway accident here this morning. Reports from the hospital are to the effect that while his condition is not alarming, his advanced age leads to the fear that serious results may develop.

JOCKEY DUGAN IN TROUBLE

BELMONT RIDER IS SUSPENDED AND HIS CASE REFERRED TO THE JOCKEY CLUB.

Rough Riding in Race in Which Trainer James Rowe Uncovers Keene Crack Influences Stewards in Taking Disciplinary Action.

New York, June 28.—James R. Keene showed another high-class two-year-old today in Lahore, a big chestnut son of the young stallion Delhi and Nora Creina. His performance in the Surf, in which he beat a smart field, was particularly impressive for the reason that in the early stages he raced greenly and to score had to come from last place in the final furlong. He had Archduke for a running mate in the race and the pair, after opening second choice, drifted to 5 to 1 at closing on the strength of a report that they could not run in the heavy going. As a matter of fact the track was not heavy, though it was slow from an early morning rain. The race was not without an unfortunate incident, for E. Dugan, who rode August Belmont's Footprint, the favorite, was guilty of rough tactics that carried Colston and Archduke all over the track. After the race the stewards suspended Dugan for the rest of the meeting and referred his case to the Jockey Club. Action was also taken on charges brought by trainer James Rowe for J. R. Keene, who charged that in the Sheepshead Bay Handicap, run last Thursday, Dugan, on Sir John Johnson, purposely carried Maskette out, permitting King James to come through on the rail and win. These charges were dismissed. Many complaints have been made against Dugan and it is expected that the Jockey Club will deal out severe punishment to him. He is under contract to August Belmont and his suspension will leave the chairman of the Jockey Club without a first-class rider.

Priscillian scored another easy victory in the mile condition race, in which he met little opposition. Bonnie Kelson ran a sterling race over the grass course when he took up 122 pounds and nosed out Superstition in 2:05 for a mile and a quarter. Shannon was winner of the six and a half furlongs handicap and Inprint scored easily over a band of two-year-olds at three-quarters over the grass course. On Wednesday and Thursday special horse shipments will be made from Sheepshead Bay to Scanton, Pa., where a race meeting begins July 2.

KENTUCKY HORSES TO GO WEST.

Cincinnati, O., June 28.—At the close of the present Latonia meeting several stables will try a trip to Butte, Mont., to race on that western circuit until racing is resumed here in the fall. Kay Spence has about made up his mind to make this trip, taking along jockey Cole, whose improved riding has been a feature of racing at Latonia. Spence has now about the biggest stable he has raced for quite a period, eight horses in all. If he goes west he will divide his string, and those he leaves behind will be turned out until fall. Trainer John Sheridan is also considering a Montana trip with the speedy gelding Shifran, which has recovered from a spell of sickness and is rapidly coming back to his best form.

NOTES OF THE TURF.

Will Shields is now the owner of the three-year-old Heno gelding, Spindle, having claimed him from R. Parr for $750 at Hamilton.

Tulsa will have the same racing officials that are officialing at Oklahoma City. Col. Milton Young will be the presiding judge and Arthur McKnight will do the starting.

George Kraus is preparing to break into steeplechasing. At Gravesend a few days ago his new trainer, Archie Zimmer, put The Gardener and Sans Souci II. through the field, and Toddington and Ben Strone horses fared fairly well for beginners.

It is said that Barney Schreiber will reduce his holdings of thoroughbred mares by one-half, and that his plans call for the retention of about 100 of the 200 now quartered at Woodlands Farm. He will not sell an acre of Woodlands nor will he part with his most prized horses.

In a report to the stewards of the National Steeplechase and Hunt Association Frank J. Bryan calls attention to the work of the Hunts Committee in the supervision of amateur racing, and says there has been material improvement in the class of the racing furnished and a marked disposition to adhere to regulations.

Two more stallions have been purchased by the Hamilton Jockey Club to be placed for service among the farmers of Wentworth County. The Lamplighter horse, Crawford, was secured from Made Nicoll, and Stringelcy, by Sempronius-Tasmanian, from R. L. Thomas. Both are horses of substance and good looks and were frequent winners in their turf careers.

Miss Mapleton, a filly that was knocked down to John Gallagher at the closing-out sale of Ed Baxter's racing stable at Latonia Saturday, was bought for F. Gellay and trainer Will McDaniel will handle her in the future. Mr. Baxter has since the sale repurchased from Dr. L. Bassler the two-year-old filly Knight Thought, and she now constitutes that Lexington horseman's only holding in the thoroughbred line.

Leamance, which has been showing improved form at Latonia, was offered as a yearling by his breeder, Garrett Watts, to several horsemen at a plug-horse price. None of them would invest in the son of Madison, as he appeared too growthy. Finally D. Riley came along and concluded he would take a long chance on the colt. The colt's recent showing has amply rewarded the patience and perseverance of his owner.

W. H. Timmons, who trained many famous horses in the older days, is one of the patrons of the present Latonia meeting. He flourished in the days of Guttenberg and Gloucester, and H. Eugene Leigh was then one of his associates. He was attracted to the west by the pari-mutuel system of betting. He is a great admirer of the style of wagering now in vogue in Kentucky and thinks it will be the salvation of racing.

CANADIAN BREEDING BUREAU WORK.

Montreal, Que., June 28.—When it comes to horse affairs, the National Bureau of Breeding is the center of the stage in Canada. The work it is at-tempting is stupendous. To put the matter con-cisely, the bureau is trying to create such a condi-tion in the horse breeding industry that England will be able to get in this country all the cavalry horses she needs in time of war.

That does not sound so big until you go into de-tails. Should England have to mobilize, she would need 238,000 horses within six months. She has only 23,000 horses at present and, in case of war with a sovereign power, she would not be permitted to buy cavalry remounts except in her own territory. Her own territory in this case means Canada. There is no room to raise the crop in England or Ireland; South Africa has a bad climate for horse rearing; Australia is kept busy supplying India, so Canada is the one big space available and this is a fine horse breeding country from end to end. The 300,000 horses needed will mean $90,000,000 to Canadian farmers and breeders and Johnny Canuck has one eye on the Union Jack and the other on his bankroll.

The remount problem has been the most baffling one with which the war office has had to contend and the bureau has set out to solve it. The work that the bureau is doing is a great thing for racing and for this reason:

The National Bureau proved before the Miller bill committee that racing was absolutely essential to the development of the thoroughbred and it also showed that the thoroughbred sires of the bureau came as donations from breeders and racing men. No racing, no bureau, was the watchword which helped to beat the Miller bill.

"It was the one great unanswerable argument of the inquiry," says Dr. J. G. Rutherford, live stock commissioner of Canada. "The bureau over-threw the climax and won the battle for the thoroughbred."

How this great work is being carried on can scarcely be told in a short story. If you measured eastward from New York to Central Africa, you would get the approximate breadth of the territory covered. The bureau has horses in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, Alberta, Saskatchewan and British Columbia. Its sires are as far south as the American border and as far north as the fifty-sixth parallel of latitude. Every-where the work is a success and the continual de-mand is for more sires.

Today a bureau man returned from North Battle-ford, Saskatchewan, with a couple of thousand miles or so from Montreal. He had taken five stallions out there to be placed on ranches and farms.

"The bureau," said he, "is as much talked of thousands of miles from Montreal as it is here. Every time the train stopped the farmers came to see the horses and begged to have others sent to them. At Saskatoon I thought I would lose the whole lot. They came to the number of 400 or 500 and said that they had been writing to the bureau for a year and the horses meant for them. I had great trouble in showing them that the stallions were going farther west."

With the thoroughbred boom approaching its zenith Maj.-Gen. Sir John French has arrived from Eng-land. He is the greatest cavalry authority in the empire and was the most successful general with cavalry in the Boer war. He knows, perhaps, better than any living man how important a part was played by the mounted men in South Africa, and he also knows what a time England had ransacking the world for remounts. It was only natural that he would be interested in a work so close to his heart, but he has surpassed the greatest expectations of bureau workers in the interest he has taken. Start-ing at Halifax he will examine all the bureau sires along the line to Calgary, Alberta, and at the end of his tour will give the bureau an exhaustive report. He will also report to the British government and, best of all, will ask King George V. to give a thoroughbred sire to the National Bureau. That such a donation would result in many others from Eng-land goes without saying. England is the home of the thoroughbred. From there he has been trans-ported to every country on earth.

One of the strongest points about the Canadian bureau is that it is not affiliated with the racing associations. This point was brought out by the Jockey Club lawyers before the Miller bill committee and it was a very strong point, indeed. It disproved the breezy contention of the so-called reformers that the thoroughbred was a gambling tool. Here was an entirely independent institution, with no track connections, fighting for the thoroughbred, not as a race horse but as the greatest known aid to the horse-breeding industry of the world, an industry which in young Canada alone represents an investment of two hundred millions of dollars.

The National Bureau fight was backed, not by turf speculators or society sportsmen, but by the fillers of the soil, the men close to the ground, and, after all, these are the men whose weight counts in a House of Commons battle. Rural Canada was with the bureau and rural Canada is like peasant France—the country rests upon it.

The Canadian bureau is thoroughly organized in the nine provinces of Canada. It covers a greater area than any bureau in the world and, at that, it is yet in its swaddling clothes. No man can tell how far it will go or how great an asset it will build up for Canada. One thing, however, is certain, and that is that with the bureau a success the running turf in Canada is safe, and when another year goes by no anti-racing measure will have a chance.

SWINDLING OF ENGLISH BOOKMAKERS.

A learned judge of the King's Bench once said that if most swindlers used half the ingenuity to follow an honest trade that they did in their notari-ous practices they would soon and of necessity gain a fortune that would do them credit. And this fa-mous remark has recently been exemplified by some extremely clever dodges that have come to light in the courts when tricky folks have been charged with swindling "bookies."

The method of one of the neatest frauds upon a bookmaker came out recently in evidence before a magistrate. A man who had become well known to the "bookie" would visit him on the afternoon of a big race and spend some time chatting with him about his own room just about when the race was on. Then suddenly he would say:

"Oh, look here, old chap, I'd almost forgotten! Why, I wanted to back Little Minnie. What price is she—7 to 1? Well, I'll take that, if you don't mind, though the race is on now, I suppose. But as neither of us knows anything about the result, I expect you won't object."

The "bookie" used to accept the bet, and invari-ably the said horse won and he had to pay. After two or three doses of this sort he began to suspect something wrong, but could not detect what it was or how he was being "done." Then, one day, whilst the better was with him, he heard a man in the street below begin playing a cornet. And somehow it struck him that he had heard a cornet played there before, more than once, when his client had been chatting with him. He said nothing, but re-solved to notice if the same thing happened again. It did, and even again. Then he took action. Finally it turned out that the better was warned by the time the cornet played—under a prearranged scheme—what horse had won the race, actually be-fore he made the bet with the "bookie."

An even snarler dodge was that brought to light some time ago, known as the "telegram fake." Here a gang used to work the oracle splendidly as a clever trick. Members of the gang went to differ-ent postoffices where each man filled up telegram forms, backing every horse in the race. These he handed to some clerk who had already in front of him a pile of messages awaiting transmission. And the clerk, being placed at the bottom of the heap to take their turn.

This was done a few minutes before the race was run. But as all telegrams are stamped when taken in, each received the stamp and mark showing that they were in before the time. Within the next minute or so a special wire would come to another office not too far off giving the actual result of the race for the guidance of the gang.

The various members of it then used to proceed again to the offices already mentioned, state that they wished to alter or revise the telegrams they had written, and thus showed which any sender is en-titled to do if his message has not been dispatched, and so they got possession of the unsent telegrams. Then they destroyed most of the useless ones, or altered them so that they availed little, while the "wire" which backed the winning horse was, of course, allowed to go just as it was. By this in-genious swindle, which was worked for months ere it was ultimately discovered and put a stop to by the landing in jail of most of the gang, the bookies were done out of large sums of money week after week. It remains to be added that if any member of the gang had reason to believe that the wires would not be sufficiently delayed by press of business he sent a wordy meaningless telegram to himself at his home address.

Then there was the case where a man was pro-secuted for defrauding a bookmaker by what came to be called the "river-slip dodge." In this case the swindler actually went with the "bookie" for an after-noon's fishing on the Thames at Molesey, and there drew his unsuspecting guest into a chat about the chief faces, laying bets on every event and winning each time. It was this very surprising run of success which proved the man's undoing and raised the "bookie's" suspicions.

When the whole facts came to light it turned out that it had been arranged between the defrauder and a confederate that the winner of each race should have its name written on at least fifty small slips of paper, which were put into the Thames higher up the river, and thus floated down to Molesey as regu-lar boats on the bosom of the waters.

Naturally, the swindler in the punt, looking out eagerly for these, managed to secure one or more, and thus learned the information he desired, after which he would get his unsuspecting companion to lay him the starting price against that horse, even though both of them knew the race was then over, for what "bookie" in such a position could suspect the very man who had been with him in a fishing punt for two hours before the race, and had never seen or spoken to a soul but himself during all that time?—London Tidbits.
